Maintaining the Quality and Integrity of your Raw Milk

To maintain the integrity and taste of your raw milk it is recommended that you DO NOT store your milk in the plastic bottles as we believe the plastic will leach into the milk. We recommend you use either glass or stainless steel containers to store your milk in.

Whatever option you choose to store your milk, please be conscious that raw milk is a living food; it is not preserved like pasteurised milk so should therefore NOT be kept on the door of the fridge. Every time the fridge door is opened the warm air is let in. You will notice that the life of your raw milk is greatly reduced if it is kept on the fridge door.

Ideally your milk should be stored at the back of your fridge preferably down the bottom (especially important if your milk is in see through glass).

NEVER leave your milk out on the bench or table, as this will also dramatically reduce the life of the milk. A good habit to get into is to put your milk straight back in the fridge after use.

It was always our intention to supply our milk in 2 litre Stainless Steel bottles, but this option did not prove viable for a number of reasons and we made the decision to use plastic bottles to transport the milk to the collection points. As well as protecting the milk from the light, the SS bottles also keep the milk well insulated thereby prolonging its life. Please bear in mind that if you have opted for a fortnightly delivery, your milk will likely not last 2 weeks in the plastic bottles.
